

Biased Dose Responses from Observational Study

A hidden attribute in the population...

- a) lowers personal thresholds for toxicity
- b) leads people to take smaller dosages on average

The hidden attribute affects a) the response [outcomes], and b) the observed dosage [treatment assignments], so it is a hidden confounder.

One that dangerously biases the apparent dose response!

